

As a 35-year licensed radio amateur who is under 50 yrs. of age (suggesting I'll be around for a while, hopefully), I have serious concern about the proposal to utilize power lines to distribute digital internet signals. Research that I've read suggests significant degradation of the HF amateur bands as a result of this practice. The amateur radio service would be seriously harmed as a result. I cannot accept that outcome, and respectfully ask the FCC to deny the request.
